

MISS WILSON SAYS TURKEY IS IN TURMOIL

Question of Near East Is a
Problem of How Soon
Peace Will Be Restored.

INDUSTRY ENCOURAGED

Women of Turkey and Persia

of Laces Sold to Foreigners.

"The whole question of the Near East seems to be one of waiting—waiting for war to end, peace to be restored, and some one to come to help the countries onto their feet once more. These countries have had one series of wars after another, and seemingly are never entirely free from them. They are waiting for Russia to open up, so that supplies may come in from there; for the boundary questions to be settled; and for a happy time to come once more," said Miss Rose Wilson, traveling secretary of the Presbyterian Church in giving her impressions of the Near East in an interview yesterday. Miss Wilson spent three years in Turkey, following the World War.

"The women of Turkey have been making laces since the time of Paul, and it is that industry that we are furthering in the Near East, in an attempt to place the people in an independent position," she said. "We have attempted to give the people industrial work that they are capable of doing. We have large factories in which several thousand women, when furnished with needles and thread, can make lace to sell to tourists. They also make all kinds of necessities, such as clothes for children, bedding, infants' layettes, and many other things."

MOTHERS GIVEN WORK
"We employ only women who have several children, as those who have but one can probably find work elsewhere. We feed the little children canned milk and attempt to take away that starved look. We have to feed them canned milk because the cows of Turkey are all tubercular and the people are mostly diseased."

"In connection with the wholesale or manufacturing houses, we have a little shop, where we sell these oriental goods to tourists. It is called the Acorne, for the American Commission on Relief for the Near East. The upper floor is devoted to a tea shop, and on the lower floor the oriental goods are sold. Supplies are sold to the natives for a very little profit, and sometimes at a price below cost, but arranged so that they may pay all they are able to for their necessities. In this way they are more independent. The profit from the goods goes back to the factory to help better conditions there."

"Constantinople is a devastated city, but not because of war. Fire has burned a great part of it. They have a fire department that is a joke, for while one member of it pours water on the fire the rest hot the dwelling. Consequently the city is ravaged with fire. It almost seems that it would be better to burn the entire city and rebuild it in a modern way. But if that were to happen the city would lose its picturesque view that it gives one as he enters the harbor and

Nearly 100 in Missouri Club at Christian College

The Missouri Club of Christian College was organized the first of 1922, after the girls had come back from their Christmas holidays. Frances Williams of Bowling Green is president of the club, Jane Newman of St. Louis, vice-president and Catherine Blanton of Sikeston, is secretary-treasurer. Mrs. Edith Jones, head of the department of home economics, is sponsor to the group.

There are nearly one hundred girls in the Missouri Club, all of them Christian College students from Missouri. They are not all included in the picture. The club has given a state dinner this year. The dining-room was decorated in black and gold, Tiger yells were given and Missouri songs were sung. "My Pretty Missouri Girl" is the club song.

IS A VASSAR GRADUATE.
Miss Wilson was born in Lake Forest, Ill., and went with her parents to Tabriz, Persia, when she was nine months old. Her parents were missionaries to that country and there she spent the first fifteen years of her life. She came to America when she was educated at Vassar, where she graduated in 1915. Since then, she has been in Y. W. C. A. work, and is now traveling application secretary for the Presbyterian Home and Foreign Missionary Board. It is in that capacity that she has been in Columbia several days this week.

"Persia is a peculiar country," says Miss Wilson. "It is run by a set of inefficient officials. It needs clean government, good schools, and better roads to help it to greater efficiency. The Persians are a charming people, who are very polite and treat foreigners with great kindness. I like Persia and am anxious to get back."

Miss Wilson expects to go back to Persia in another year, as a missionary. She is a third generation missionary, as her father and grandfather were both missionaries. While stationed in Turkey, she spent her vacation in Egypt.
